3. From which sources do we collect your personal data?

In principle, we procure personal data directly from you (e.g., through forms, during communications with us, in relation to contracts, website usage, etc.). In cases where it is legally permissible, we also acquire data from publicly accessible sources (such as debt enforcement registers, land registers, commercial registers, media outlets, and the internet, including social media). Additionally, we receive data from authoritative bodies, and from third parties like data aggregators specializing in criminal activities (like World Check, etc.).

The categories of personal data that we obtain from third parties include, but are not limited to:

- Information extracted from public registers.

- Details acquired in the context of official and legal proceedings.
- Information related to your professional roles and activities.
- Particulars about you disclosed in interactions and meetings with third parties.
- Data assessing your creditworthiness.
- Information shared by individuals in your proximity to facilitate contract formation or processing involving you (e.g., information aiding adherence to legal obligations like combating fraud, money laundering, terrorism, and export constraints).
- Relevant information about you disseminated in the media and online channels, in instances where this is pertinent to the specific case.

4. Location

Your personal data is stored within Switzerland on our own servers and/or on those operated by our IT service providers.

5. Is your personal data shared with third parties?

We share your personal data with the following categories of recipients:

Service providers: Our collaborations extend to service providers both within Switzerland and internationally. These entities either process data concerning you on our behalf, share joint responsibilities with us, or independently receive data about you from us (e.g., IT providers, custodian banks, accountants).

Key IT service providers for us are:

- TTP Consulting AG, Erlenbach, Switzerland
- Alphasys AG, Winterthur, Switzerland

We furnish these service providers with the necessary data required for the fulfilment of their services, which could involve information related to you. It is important to note that these service providers might also employ such data for their internal purposes. For instance, credit agencies could utilize data concerning your outstanding debts and payment history, while anonymized data might be employed to enhance service quality.

Contracts established with these service providers encompass clauses aimed at safeguarding your personal data. Additionally, these service providers might process data pertaining to the utilization of their services and other data generated through such usage. As independent data controllers, they may do so in pursuit of their legitimate interests, such as statistical analyses or invoicing. These service providers have their own data protection statements that elucidate their autonomous data processing practices.

Authorities: In certain instances, we may share personal data with governmental bodies, courts, and other authoritative entities both within Switzerland and internationally. Such actions are executed when we are either legally obligated or entitled to do so, or when it is deemed necessary to safeguard our interests. In such cases, these authorities proceed to process the data under their independent responsibility.

All of these recipient categories might engage with third parties themselves, potentially resulting in the accessibility of your data to these entities as well. While we have the capacity to limit processing by specific third parties (such as IT providers), we might not possess the same degree of control over other third parties (for instance, authorities, custodian banks, etc.).

6. Third-Party Plugins

We may use third-party content (so-called plugins). Specifically, we employ the LinkedIn share button and Google Maps.

When you are visiting our website, a connection may be established with the corresponding social network. Consequently, the buttons' content is conveyed to your browser, which then incorporates it into the website.

This means that the relevant provider consistently receives the notification that you have accessed our website. The distinction of whether you are a member of the social network or logged in holds no bearing in this context. Additionally, regardless of your actual interaction with the embedded content, the social network automatically gathers information.

In this context, the following data might be transmitted:

- IP address
- Browser information and operating system
- Screen resolution
- Installed browser plugins (e.g., Adobe Flash Player)
- Visitor origin (in case you have followed a link)
- URL of the present page

If you are currently logged into any of the social networks while browsing our website, there is a possibility that the details of your website visit could be linked to your membership data and retained. Should you be a member of a social network and wish to avoid this transfer of data, it is advisable to log out of your social network account before accessing our website.

We have no authority over the extent of data collected by social networks. For comprehensive insights into the nature, scope, and intent of data processing, as well as information about subsequent data handling and your associated rights, along with privacy safeguarding settings, please consult the data protection policies of the respective social networks. Additionally, you hold the option of thwarting data transmission by employing browser add-ons to block social media plugins.

Our website incorporates functionalities from the LinkedIn network, provided by LinkedIn Inc (USA). Whenever you access any of our pages containing LinkedIn features, a connection to LinkedIn servers is initiated. This interaction informs LinkedIn of your visit to our web pages, as identified by your IP address. If you proceed to click the "Recommend Button" of LinkedIn while logged into your LinkedIn account, it becomes possible for LinkedIn to associate your website visit with both you and your user account. Please be aware that, in our capacity as the page provider, we lack insight into the content of the data transmitted or its subsequent utilization by LinkedIn.

For further information on this matter, you can refer to LinkedIn's privacy policy available at: <https://www.linkedin.com/legal/privacy-policy>.

To seamlessly present interactive maps on our website and facilitate the user-friendly utilization of map functions, we incorporate Google Maps from Google LLC (USA). For the utilization of these services, the user's IP address is transmitted to Google. This IP address is essential for content display but is exclusively employed for content delivery purposes. Google does not gather your location data without your consent, usually obtained through your device settings.

For access to Google's privacy policy, please refer to: <https://policies.google.com/privacy>.

7. Transmission of personal data abroad

The personal data is processed in Switzerland and in Canada.

If a recipient is situated in a country lacking adequate legal data protection measures, we engage them in a contractual commitment to adhere to relevant data protection standards. To achieve this, we utilize the revised standard contractual clauses established by the European Commission. These clauses can be accessed here: https://eur-lex.europa.eu/eli/dec_impl/2021/914/oj? provided the recipient isn't already governed by an established and legally recognized set of data protection regulations, and we cannot avail ourselves of an exception.

Exceptions could arise, especially in cases of legal proceedings abroad, situations involving paramount public interests, instances where contractual obligations necessitate such disclosure, circumstances where you have provided consent, or when dealing with data that you have made publicly accessible without voicing opposition to its processing.

Furthermore, it is essential to acknowledge that data exchanged over the internet often traverses through third countries. Consequently, your data could be routed abroad even if the sender and recipient are located within the same country.

8. Your rights

You can object to data processing at any time, and you also have the following rights at your disposal:

Right of access: You hold the right to request free and unrestricted access to your personal data stored by us, provided we are engaged in its processing. This entitlement empowers you to verify the extent of personal data under our processing, ensuring its alignment with pertinent data protection regulations.

Right to rectification: You hold the right to have any inaccurate or incomplete personal data rectified, and we are obliged to notify you of such rectifications. In the event of rectifications, we will also communicate these changes to recipients of the pertinent data, unless such actions are impractical or entail a disproportionate level of effort.

Right to erasure: Under specific circumstances, you hold the right to request the erasure of your personal data. However, it is important to note that there might be instances where the right to erasure is not applicable.

Right to restrict processing: Under specific circumstances, you are entitled to request the limitation of your personal data's processing by us.

Right to data transfer: Under specific circumstances, you hold the right to receive the personal data you have furnished to us, in a machine-readable format, free of charge.

Right of withdrawal: In principle, you have the right to withdraw your consent at any time with effect for the future. Processing activities based on your consent in the past do not become unlawful as a result of your revocation.

9. Retention period

We retain personal data for the duration necessary to fulfil the initial purpose of collection, or for a period mandated by pertinent laws, regulations, or contractual obligations. Additionally, we retain data when there exists a predominant interest in its retention. Upon reaching the determined period, data will be deleted.

Data retention obligations emanate from accounting and tax regulations. As per these regulations, business correspondence, finalized contracts, and accounting records are to be retained for a span of up to 10 years. Similarly, specific data must be preserved for up to 10 years following the conclusion of a business relationship, in alignment with anti-money laundering legislation.

10. Data security

We diligently implement suitable technical and organizational security measures to safeguard personal data against unauthorized access and misuse. These measures encompass IT and network security solutions, access controls, encryption for data carriers and transmissions.

In cases where third parties are granted access to our data, specific measures are put in place, delineated within the framework of the order processing contract.
